

Medical Staff Relations

1.5 Face-to-Face Education Credits

Thursday, February 22, 2018* 2:00 to 3:30 PM, ET
Frankfort Country Club • 101 Duntreath Street • Frankfort, KY 40601

The relationship between the medical staff and administration is critical to the success of health care organizations. To be successful, executives must identify strategies for involving the medical staff in decision making and planning, as well as determining how to align the medical staff with organizational strategies.

Given the current reimbursement environment, in addition to the multitude of changes impacting health care, this panel will share ways executives can work more proactively with their medical staff.

Who Should Attend:

Hospital c-suite executives, service line leaders, department managers, and other ACHE members and non-members wishing to learn more about strengthening medical staff relations.

You will learn more about:

- The perspective of the physician executive in managing medical staff relations.
- The involvement of medical staff leadership in strategies and operational decision making.
- Setting up physician leaders for success and giving physician leaders the tools to be effective.
